NEWS OF SOUTH RICHMONDGETS LIGHT SENTENCE*Jury Finds Lora Coleman Guilty of Involuntary Manslaughter.

Finding the accused guilty of involuntary manslaughter, the jury which heard the evidence against Lora Coleman, the young colored woman on trial in Hustings Court, Part II, for the murder of her mother, fixed her punishment at fifteen days in the City Jail together with a fine of $25. Sentence was passed by Judge Ernest H. Wells, and the woman was taken to jail to begin her short term.

Scarcely five minutes were taken up by the jury in arriving at its verdict. It was generally conceded that the Commonwealth had no chance to prove a case of first degree murder, but the light sentence caused some surprise. The woman, according to the evidence, lived in Richmond. Going to visit her mother, she stopped at a decent place and took a drink of liquor. Arriving at her parent's home, she soon went to bed. Her mother, however, was in a quarrel with a sister. The father took a hand, and the general melee occurred. During the mix-up, a lighted lamp was thrown. It was claimed by the Commonwealth that the Coleman woman had hurled it at her father.

Hitting the floor, the lamp exploded, and the flaming oil was thrown on the mother. She was badly burned about the face and neck. Death resulted two days later at the City Hospital, where she had been taken for treatment. Upon finishing the jail term, the convicted woman must appear in Police Court, Part II, to answer to a charge of assaulting her father. The City Sergeant has been instructed to hold her pending the outcome of this latter charge.

No other cases were on the docket. The regular weekly civil docket was heard.

In Hustings Court, Part II.

In order that minor cases can be disposed of, Judge Ernest H. Wells, of Hustings Court, Part II, will hear the bigamy charge against Albert L. Clarke Saturday morning. The appealed case of R. H. Lee, convicted in Police Court, Part II, on a warrant issued by Justice H. A. Maurice, will be tried first this morning. The trial will be followed by that of John Allen, colored, accused of felonious assault. A man is charged with carving the ribs of a woman.
